Bad Fire In Eveline Twp.

Clarence Johnston Suffers a $5,000 Fire Loss.

Clarence Johnston, located six miles north of East Jordan in Eveline township, suffered a heavy loss last Saturday when his fine large barn with contents, together with ten head of cattle, was destroyed by fire.

Mr. Johnston was at Boyne City with team and wagon and the fire, which started about 5:00 p. m., was not discovered until the entire structure was a mass of flames.

In addition to the structure, ten head of cattle were destroyed, the better part of the farming implements, an auto, about five tons of hay and a quantity of rye and oats.

Two small boys were playing around the barn, and it is thought the children accidentally fired the building while playing with matches.

The loss is estimated around $5,000 with only $1000 insurance.

MRS. D. A. McKINLEY RECEIVED INJURIES IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Mrs. D. A. McKinley of this city was seriously injured, and her little child bruised, in an auto accident near Boyne City last Thursday afternoon.

The accident occured on the road between Advance and Boyne City, near the drinking fountain, when Mrs. McKinley attempted to remove her child from her lap to the seat beside her. The car left the road while her hand was momentarily from the wheel and ran, with considerable force, into the culvert. Mrs. McKinley was thrown against the steering wheel with sufficient force to break it, and then plunged into the wind-shield which was shattered and from which she received severe face cuts. Her body too was badly bruised. The child was also bruised but fortunately escaped serious injury.

After the accident Mrs. McKinley attempted to walk into Boyne City carrying her child. She was soon picked up however by a passing motorists and rushed to the office of a physician where her wounds, and the bruises of the child, received attention.

Maybe Dry Agents of U. S. May Learn Lesson

Federal prohibition enforcement officers may find effective assistance in a study of the methods employed by Tom Mix to regulate a wide open road house in his first special attraction, "Soft Boiled," presented by William Fox and directed by J. G. Blystone. "Soft Boiled" opens at the Temple Theatre on Saturday for 1 day only, matinee and evening. It presents the aggressive Tom Mix in the most unique role of his career. Incidentally, he reforms the road house, acquires a fortune and wins the girl. All this in spite of the fact that he wears horn rim spectacles and spats, shocking even Tony, his wonder horse. Sec'y. Wilbur Joins "Thirteen Club"

Washington—Secretary of the Navy Wilbur has been elected to the "Thirteen club," founded several years ago by Woodrow Wilson and others who consider the number lucky. The secretary of the organization, advised Wilbur of his election, saying that the name "Curtis D. Wilbur" contained the requisite number of letters and in other respects the new leader of the navy was qualified.

Eagle Tries to Carry Away Babe

Toulouse, France—A farmer saved a child, aged 3, from being carried off by an eagle when he attacked the savage bird with a spade. The farmer was working in a field when he saw the eagle swoop down and carry off a pig, then it returned and seized the child, which was playing in the yard. Rushing up the farmer found the eagle gripping the child's dress in its talons. The baby apparently was rather heavy for the bird to lift. Except for the scare it was uninjured.

There can't be much hope for Europe until she believes the saw and hammer are mightier than sword.

A lot of European radicals are playing horse with their countries and expect a stable government.

Maybe the human race did not spring from the monkey, but a lot of specimens of it would have a hard time proving they didn't.

Springvale Man Badly Injured

Albert E. Stevenson Shot Twice Through Left Lung.

Alfred E. Stevenson, recently made manager of the Cobbs and Mitcell store at Springvale, was taken to Petoskey hospital last Saturday suffering from two gun shot wounds through the left lung. The bullets from a 32 caliber revolver, passed through his body. Mr. Stevenson was alone at the store at the time and just how the accident happened is not yet known.

Mr. Stevenson, while still very weak, rested quite comfortably Sunday night and his chances for recovery are reported good. Mr. Stevenson kept the revolver at store as a protection against any possible robbery and also used it to shoot rats in the rear of the store and in the basement.

It is thought the gun was fired while being recharged or that Mr. Stevenson stumbled and fell.—Monday's Petoskey News.

COUNTY REPUBLICANS IN CONVENTION AT BOYNE CITY

Tack Taken From Girls Lung.

Columbus, O.—Dr. Charles F. Bowen successfully removed a tack from the lung of Christina Polites, 7 years old, daughter of John Polites of Washington, Pa. The tack was removed by a forceps, guided by an X-ray light through a tube extending through the child's mouth to the lung.

Railroad Drops Women Employees.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Women employees in the traffic department of the Lehigh Valley railroad have been dropped from the service. Many of the women were transferred to other departments. Men are better qualified for the traffic department work according to officials of the road.

Severe Blizzard Hits Canada.

Winnipeg—One of the worst blizzards of recent years swept over Western Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan last week. This city was isolated from the East and South for hours, as the sleet and snow tore down all telegraph wires. The snow in Winnipeg followed heavy rain, thunder and lightning. Fifteen inches of snow was reported at Brandon.

Father to Execute Son's Slayer.

Miami, Ariz.—Unless the supreme court interferes W. H. Grosh will spring the trap June 20 that will end the life of William B. Ward, Negro slayer of his son, Theodore Wilbur Grosh, a student at the University of Arizona. Warden Sims, of the state penitentiary has granted the aged man's request that he be permitted to have that bit of revenge.

Sacrifices Life to Prevent Blast.

Acton, Mass.—August Eore, of Concord Junction, died from burns received when he threw himself on a bag of blazing powder in an attempt to prevent an explosion at the American Smokeless Powder Co. plant here. He was working in a small dry house 500 yards from the main building when the fire started among the bags he was piling. Despite his efforts the rest ignited and an explosion of the gases blew him through the door, injuring him fatally.

OTIS J. SMITH,
City Clerk.

You don't have to be a sleuth to find fault.

Probably there never was a woman who did not wish that once in her life she might have a pocketbook stuffed to overflowing with bills to spend as foolishly as she pleased in the shops of a big city.

Postal Bandits Get $50,000 Loot.

St. Paul, Minn.—Fifty thousand dollars in currency was included in the loot obtained by three bandits who held up two postal employes in South St. Paul, escaping with five pouches of registered mail.

Japs Lead in Warship Building.

London — Since the Washington armament treaty was signed Great Britain has laid down but one submarine, as compared, so far as is known here, with six light cruisers, 17 destroyers and 13 submarines by Japan.

Babe Crosses Ocean in Suit Case.

New York—Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Lewis of Los Angeles arrived from Vienna with their four months' old son in a suit case crib, devised by the doctor. The suitcase, 12 by 36 inches, is well ventilated, and contains all the comforts of an ordinary crib.

Lansing On Mexican Commission.

Washington—Robert Lansing, secretary of state in the Wilson cabinet, has been selected by President Coolidge as the American member of the mixed commission which will adjust claims between the United States and Mexico, it was learned here.

Asks $10,000 For Police Dog Bite

Detroit—When Mike Kinckowisk called at the home of Max Metal, to install a water meter, a police dog took several hearty mouthfuls out of his anatomy, Kinckowisk declares in a suit for damages against Metal, filed in Circuit Court. He asks $10,000.

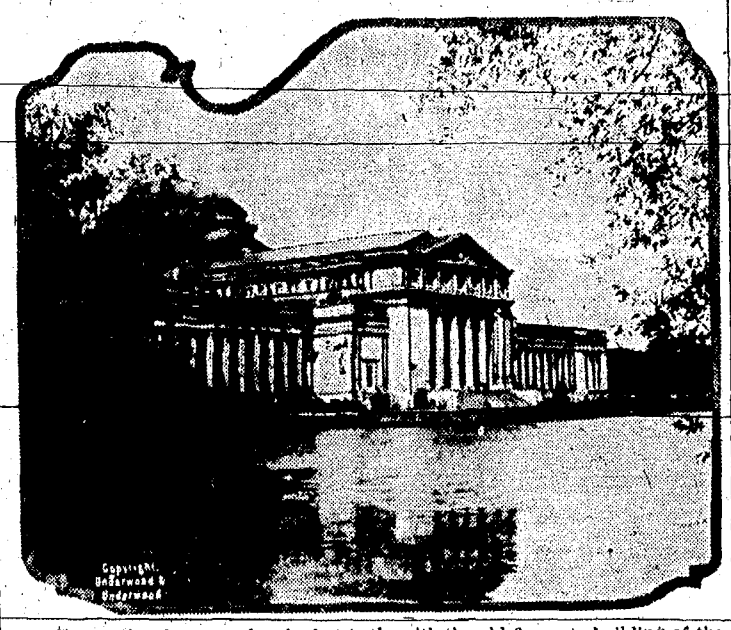

Dog Ill; Paderewski Cancels Tour.

To Be Finest of Convention Halls

Chicago has long wondered what to do with the old fine arts building of the World's Fair, in Jackson park. It is now proposed to convert the bedutiful building into the largest and best convention hall in the world at an expenditure of more than $4,000,000. It will seat 25,000 persons and there will be provision for the holding of athletic contests.

N. M. Amateur Base Ball League

Reorganizes For 1924 Season. Fast Teams Assured.

A meeting of Northern Michigan base ball enthusiasts was held at Petoskey last Friday night and plans made for the coming season. A ten-game series was arranged to commence June 29th and end Aug. 31st.

R. E. Miller of Petoskey was elected President-Secretary, D. A. McKinley of East Jordan Vice President and Chas. H. McCarthy of Petoskey, Treasurer.

Those from East Jordan attending the meeting were Dr. W. H. Parks, Dr. G. W. Bechtold, C. A. Covey, John J. Mikula, Roscoe Mackey, Fenton Bulow D. A. McKinley, L. G. Balch, Enoch Giles and Henry W. Cook.

Harbor Springs and East Jordan teams are already well organized. These teams have good financial support and the business men of the two cities are enthusiasticly backing the home organizations. Organization work is going nicely at Charlevoix and Boyne City, while Petoskey and Pellston have not yet gotten started.

CAR ACCIDENT AT BOYNE CITY CAUSES ARRESTS.

(Boyne Citizen)

A car accident which might have easily resulted in fatalities, occured last Friday night on the Boyne Falls road, near the Flynn Robinson farm.

Mr. George E. Bristol, accompanied by his wife; Mrs. Ben LaCroix; and Mrs. E. L. Brockway, were returning to the city in the Bristol "Star" car, when it is alleged, they were ran into by a Ford driven by Louis Maule. Both cars were wrecked and Mrs. LaCroix sustained a bump on her head, while Mrs. Brockway received a painful cut over her eyes. Fortunately no one was killed.

Chief of Police Vaughan was notified and went at once to the scene of the catastrophe. After viewing the wrecks; observing the actions of Mr. Maule and getting an idea of his condition from his breath; and after locating a quantity of liquor in his wrecked car; that gentleman was placed under arrest, brought to the city, and locked up in the jail.

The Prosecuting Attorney and Sheriff were notified and Saturday afternoon arrived in the city. Mr. Maule submitted to a severe examination and as a culmination Mr. Walter Ware was placed under arrest, charged with violating the liquor laws.

At the Maule hearing it developed that he had purchased several drinks of liquor, at the Ware home on North Park street, before starting on his drive Armed with this evidence the officers obtained a search warrant and after supper Saturday night visited Ware's home where they claim to have obtained sufficient evidence to merit placing him under arrest. He was at once released on a bond furnished by a local merchant.

Even a captain of industry is likely to be a private in his home.

People permit a preacher to preach because he is paid for it, but if you are not paid for it, get some other occupation.

A lot of the boys in the political trenches just now are getting covered with dirt while trying to dig themselves in.

Cafeterias and automobiles have done their best to make the home unnecessary but you can't pull off a satisfactory family fight in a cafeteria or a car.

Somebody ought to offer a prize for an epithet to be applied to the motorist who tries to pass the car in front at a crossing. We know what the driver in front calls him.

MICHIGAN FIGHTS LOWERING LAKES

PROTESTS CHICAGO PROJECT TO DIVERT MORE WATER IN DRAINAGE CANAL.

BRANDED AS STEAL, BY HUDSON

Michigan Solon Says Private Clique, For Own Interests, Would Damage States—Lakes Already Too Low

Washington—A number of Michigan cities situated on the Great Lakes, have wired protests to the House Rivers and Harbors Committee against Chicago's action in diverting 4,200 cubic feet of water a second from Lake Michigan through the Chicago drainage canal; and against the Hull bill, which would permit diversion of 10,000 feet.

The telegrams were put in the record by Andrew B. Dougherty, Michigan attorney general, and Chas. E. Boyd, of the Detroit Board of Commerce.

Representative Grant M. Hudson, of Michigan, in a statement characterized the bills to divert 10,000 cubic feet of water per second "a disgusting example of a political clique seeking to exploit a great natural resource for personal profit with entire disregard to the welfare and interests of the people and property bordering on the lakes."

The statements read before the committee and filed with it by Mr. Boyd showed that the lake levels at Michigan points are the lowest in the memories of the oldest inhabitants; that the recession of the shore line is progressively increasing, and that if it is not checked, untold millions of damage will result.

Representatives of Milwaukee and Cleveland appeared in opposition to the diversion, stating generally that while they did not oppose development of a waterway down the Illinois valley to the gulf, a flow of 5,000 cubic feet per second had been shown sufficient for the greatest amount of traffic that could be borne through that proposed waterway for years.

The Michigan towns who have protested against the bill are: Alpena, Charlevoix, Detroit, Escanaba, Frankfort, Grand Haven, Harbor Beach, Manistique, Menominee, Muskegon, Petosky, Sebewaing, St. Ignace.

BANK STOCK HOLDERS MUST PAY

Grand Rapids Court Awards $180,884 for Payment to Depositors.

Grand Rapids—A decree awarding the Michigan Trust company, assignee of the Farmers & Merchants bank, a judgment of $180,884 against Frank J. Cook, its former cashier, and eight other stockholders, has been signed by Circuit Judge Willis B. Perkins.

The order makes each of the defendants jointly and individually liable for this sum, which represents the difference between the liquidated assets, available for dividends to creditors, and the total amount of the claims. The bank became financially involved about three years ago when it closed its doors.

The stockholders against whom this judgment is rendered are, in addition to Cook, his father, Abraham F. Cook, George Bowditch, Dick Van Dyke, L. C. Amy, John McEwan, Francis M. Dregge, Clara Alcumbrach and Chauncey I. Patterson.

The assignee has already paid dividends amounting to 60 1-2 per cent, and the funds on hand will permit another dividend of approximately 10 per cent. Stockholders of the bank have already paid in $154,517 in settlement of their liability.

REAPPORTIONMENT ON BALLOT

Wayne County Invokes Referendum to Get Equal Representation.

Detroit—The ways and means committee of the board of county supervisors has authorized the printing of petitions to place the reapportionment amendment on the ballot at the November election.

The measure, if passed, would take no power from the legislature, but in case the legislature failed to reapportion representatives would empower the secretary of state to do so.

The counties which would be affected by the amendment are Wayne, Genesee and Iron. At present Wayne county has 33 per cent of the state's population, pays 42 per cent of the entire state tax, and has legislative representation of only 14 per cent.

Mail Boxes Are Wrecked.

Port Huron, Mich.—Rural mail boxes between Memphis and Pound Hill and east from Riley Center, St. Clair County, for several miles have been torn down by vandals, according to a report to Sheriff H. W. Maines, R. M. Sautar, prosecuting attorney, and postal officials by Miss De Mott, the postmaster at Memphis. The evidence obtained by the officers indicates that the work may be that of a demented person. Postal authorities are investigating.

JAPS TO BOYCOTT CALIFORNIA GOODS

FEELING AGAINST EXCLUSION ACT OF U. S. CONGRESS RUNS HIGH.

AMBASSADOR DENIES THREAT

Hanihari in Formal Note Says That "Grave Consequences" Meaning Was Misconstrued.

Tokio—The Japan Printing association, at a general meeting held here, voted to place a boycott on all goods from the state of California.

The senate's action has aroused much public feeling here. Labor elements, hardest hit by the American ruling, are preparing demonstration against the exclusion. The Japan federation of labor and the government workmen's association are planning joint mass meetings in both Tokio and Osaka.

Washington—Formal denial that he had intended to "threaten" the United States when he told Secretary Hughes that "grave consequences" would follow the passage of the Japanese exclusion act in congress has been made by Masanao Hanihara, Japanese ambassador to the United States.

This was disclosed when the state department made public an exchange of letters between the ambassador and Secretary Hughes, in which Japan's representative said his use of the phrase had been misconstrued in the senate, and Mr. Hughes assured him, in reply, that the state department understood his meaning even if the senate did not.

Wallace Orders Kansas Packers to Stop Discrimination

Washington—Secretary Wallace has signed an order under the packers and stockyards act against 56 commission firms, members of the Kansas City Livestock exchange, and 30 firms of traders operating on the Kansas City Market, requiring them to cease discriminating against the Producers' Commission association, in purchase of cattle. The Producers' association is a co-operative organization.

Practically all buying of cattle from the Producers' association by commission men and traders ceased last September, a statement by the department of agriculture said, and upon complaint, Secretary Wallace issued a notice of investigation.

Extensive hearings were held and more than 100 witnesses were examined.

TEAPOT DOME INQUIRY ENDS

Senate Oil Committee Hears Last of Witnesses This Week

Washington—The present week is expected to see the end of the activities of the senate oil committee which for months has poured out sensation after sensation.

When the last of the witnesses has been heard, the committee's doors will be closed, while the investigators prepare their report to the senate, recommendations for the preventions of future oil scandals.

The committee will not totally pass out of existence. It is a formally constituted committee of the senate—the public lands committee. It will, however, lie dormant, so far as the oil investigation is concerned.

Meanwhile, it will keep a watchful eye on the progress of the cases resulting from its activities now pending in the courts.

LEVIATHAN DAMAGED BY FIRE

Giant U. S. Liner Swept by Flames While in Port

London—The giant liner Leviathan, largest of the U. S. fleet of passenger ships, was severely damaged by fire while lying at its dock at Southampton. The passengers had all left before the fire was discovered.

Fire swept the upper deck and bridge and raged unchecked for an hour and a half. Three brigades of firemen finally extinguished the flames.

The smoking room was badly damaged. Water caused most of the damage on the lower deck.

After an investigation, ship officers attributed the cause of the fire to the fusing of wires in an electric heater.

Propose Largest Auditorium

Chicago—The fine arts building of the world Columbian exposition would become the largest auditorium in the world under plans to be submitted to the voters of Chicago, it has been announced. Now a mere shell of plaster and stucco over wood, the building, which long has been held as the most famous piece of classic architecture in America, would be remodeled at an expense of four million dollars into a convention hall seating 35,000 persons.

The Song of the Builders

ON every hand is heard the rattle of the builder's hammer and the rasp of his saw. Overnight, it seems, buildings rise—new streets appear.

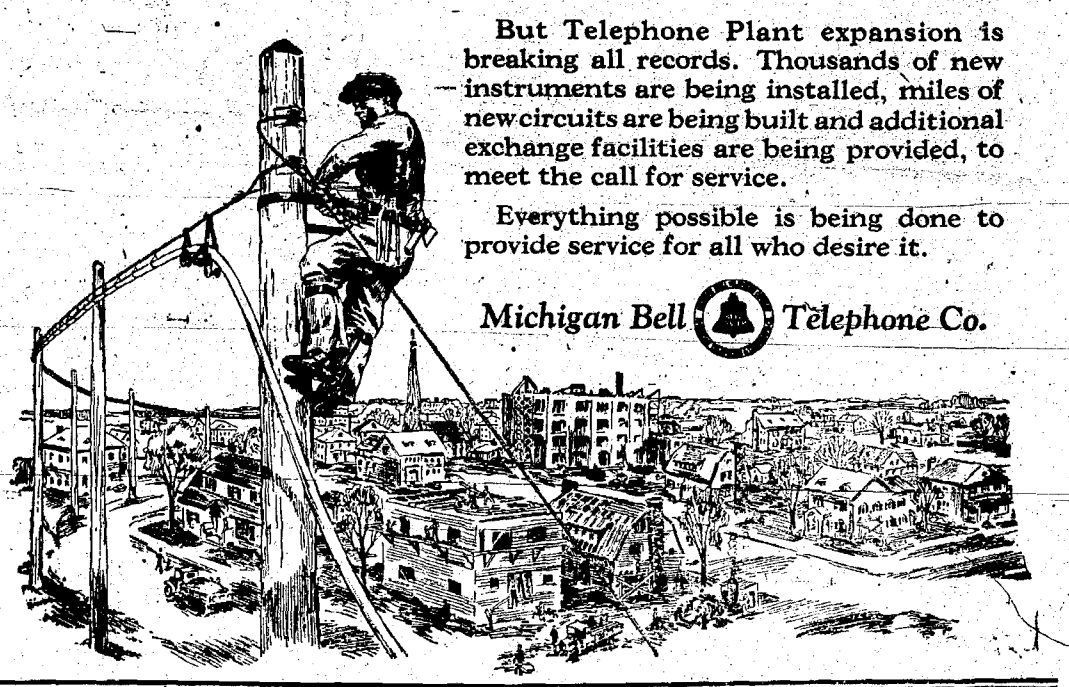

And the thousands of new homes and great buildings increase the problems of the public service companies.

This Company attempts to foresee the great growth of service demand and extends its plant into new districts as rapidly as possible, in an effort to most efficiently serve the people of Michigan.

However, sudden unforeseen population and industrial growth frequently make it impossible to furnish utility service at all points immediately upon demand. Hundreds of new telephones are wanted. The Telephone Company's problem is the same as that of the water, sewer, gas, electric, street, and school services.

But Telephone Plant expansion is breaking all records. Thousands of new instruments are being installed, miles of new circuits are being built and additional exchange facilities are being provided, to meet the call for service.

Everything possible is being done to provide service for all who desire it.

CHAPTER XII

Francis drove direct from Grosvenor square to his chambers in the Temple, and found Shopland, his friend from Scotland Yard, awaiting his arrival.

"Any news?" Francis inquired.

"Nothing definite, I am sorry to say," was the other's reluctant admission.

Francis hung up his hat, threw himself into his easy-chair and lit a cigarette.

"The lad's brother is one of my oldest friends, Shopland," he said. "He is naturally in a state of great distress."

The detective scratched his chin thoughtfully.

"I said 'nothing definite' just now, sir," he observed. "As a rule, I never mention suspicions, but with you it is a different matter. I haven't discovered the slightest trace of Mr. Reginald Wilmore, or the slightest reason for his disappearance. He seems to have been a well-conducted young gentleman, a little extravagant, perhaps, but able to pay his way and with nothing whatever, that is to say, except one almost insignificant thing."

"And that?"

"A slight tendency towards bad company, sir. I have heard of his being about with one or two whom we are keeping our eye upon."

"Bobby Fairfax's lot, by any chance?"

Shopland nodded.

"He was with Jacks and Miss Daisy Hylton, a night or two before he disappeared. I am not sure that a young man named Morse wasn't of the party, too."

"What do you make of that lot?" Francis asked, curiously. "Are they gamesters, dope fiends, or simply vicious?"

The detective was silent. He was gazing intently at his rather square-toed shoes.

"There are rumors, sir," he said, presently, "of things going on in the West End which want looking into very badly—very badly, indeed. You will remember speaking to me of Sir Timothy Brast?"

"I remember quite well," Francis acknowledged.

"I've nothing to go on," the other continued. "I am working almost in the dark to find a clue, as it were, but I'm beginning to have ideas about Sir Timothy Brast; just ideas."

"As, for instance?"

"Well, he stands on rather queer terms with some of his acquaintances, sir. Now you saw, down at Soto's bar, the night we arrested Mr. Fairfax, that not one of those young men there spoke to Sir Timothy as though they were acquainted, nor he to them. Yet I happened to find out that every one of them, including Fairfax himself, was present at a party Sir Timothy Brast gave at his house down the river a week or two before."

"I'm afraid there isn't much in that," Francis declared. "Sir Timothy has the name of being an eccentric person everywhere, especially in this respect—he never notices acquaintances. I heard, only the other day, that while he was wonderfully hospitable and charming to all his guests, he never remembered them outside his house."

Shopland nodded.

"A convenient eccentricity," he remarked, a little dryly. "I have heard the same thing myself. You spent the night at his country cottage, did you not, Mr. Ledsam? Did he offer to show you over the Walled House?"

"How the dickens did you know I was down there?" Francis demanded, with some surprise. "I was just thinking as I drove up that I hadn't left my address either here or at Clarges street."

"Next time you visit Sir Timothy," the detective observed, "I should advise you to do so. I knew you were there, Mr. Ledsam, because I was in the neighborhood myself. I have been doing a little fishing, and keeping my eye on that wonderful estate of Sir Timothy's."

Francis was interested.

"Shopland," he said, "I believe that our intelligences, such as they are, are akin."

"What do you suspect Sir Timothy of?" the detective asked bluntly.

"I suspect him of nothing," Francis replied. "He is simply, to my mind, an incomprehensible, somewhat sinister figure, who might be capable of anything. He may have very excellent qualities which he contrives to conceal, or he may be an archcriminal. His personality absolutely puzzles me."

There was a knock at the door and Angrave appeared. Apparently he had forgotten Shopland's presence, for he ushered in another visitor.

"Sir Timothy Brast to see you, sir," he announced.

The moment was one of trial to every one, admirably borne. Shopland remained in his chair, with only a casual glance at the newcomer. Francis rose to his feet with a half-stifled expression of anger at the clumsiness of his clerk. Sir Timothy, well-shaven and groomed, attired in a perfectly fitting suit of gray flannel, nodded to Francis in friendly fashion and laid his Homburg hat upon the table with the air of a familiar.

"My dear Ledsam," he said, "I do hope that you will excuse this early call. I could only have been an hour behind you on the road. I dare say you can guess what I have come to see you about. Can we have a word together?"

"Certainly," was the ready reply. "You remember my friend Shopland, Sir Timothy? It was Mr. Shopland who arrested young Fairfax that night at Soto's."

"I remember him perfectly," Sir Timothy declared. "I fancied, directly I entered, that your face was familiar," he added, turning to Shopland. "I am rather ashamed of myself about that night. My little outburst must have sounded almost ridiculous to you two. To tell you the truth, I quite failed at that time to give Mr. Ledsam credit for gifts which I have since discovered him to possess."

"Mr. Shopland and I are now discussing another matter," Francis went on, pushing a box of cigarettes toward Sir Timothy, who was leaning against the table in an easy attitude. "Don't go, Shopland, for a minute. We were consulting together about the disappearance of a young man, Reggie Wilmore, the brother of a friend of mine—Andrew Wilmore, the novelist."

"Disappearance?" Sir Timothy repeated, as he lit a cigarette. "That is rather a vague term."

"The young man has been missing from home for over a week," Francis said, "and left no trace whatever of his whereabouts. He was not in financial trouble, he does not seem to have been entangled with any young woman, he had not quarreled with his people, and he seems to have been on the best of terms with the principal at the house of business where he was employed. His disappearance, therefore, is, to say the least of it, mysterious."

Sir Timothy assented gravely.

"The lack of motive to which you allude," he pointed out, "makes the case interesting. Still, one must remember that London is certainly the city of modern mysteries. If a new 'Arabian Nights' were written, it might well be about London, I dare say Mr. Shopland will agree with me," he continued, turning courteously toward the detective, "that disappearances of this sort are not nearly so uncommon as the uninitiated would believe. For one that is reported in the papers, there are half a dozen which are not."

"Where do you suppose they disappear to?" Francis inquired.

"Who can tell?" was the speculative reply. "For an adventurous youth there are a thousand doors which lead to romance. Besides, the lives of none of us are quite so simple as they seem. Even youth has its secret chapters. This young man, for instance, might be on his way to Australia, happy in the knowledge that he has escaped from some murky chapter of life which will now never be known. He may write to his friends, giving them a hint. The whole thing will blow over."

"There may be cases such as you suggest, Sir Timothy," the detective said quietly. "Our investigations, so far as regards the young man in question, however, do not point that way."

Sir Timothy turned over his cigarette to look at the name of the maker.

"Excellent tobacco," he murmured. "By-the-bye, what did you say the young man's name was?"

"Reginald Wilmore," Francis told him.

"A good name," Sir Timothy murmured. "I am sure I wish you both every good fortune in your quest. Would it be too much to ask now, Mr. Ledsam, for the single minute alone?"

"By no means," Francis answered.

"I'll wait in the office, if I may," Shopland suggested, rising to his feet. "I want to have another word with you before I go."

"My business with Mr. Ledsam is of a family nature," Sir Timothy said apologetically, as Shopland passed out. "I will not keep him for more than a moment."

Shopland closed the door behind him. Sir Timothy waited until he heard his departing footsteps. Then he turned back to Francis.

"Mr. Ledsam," he said, "I have come to ask you if you know anything of my daughter's whereabouts?"

"Nothing whatever," Francis replied, "I was on the point of ringing you up to ask you the same question."

"Did she tell you that she was leaving the Sanctuary?"

"She gave me not the slightest intimation of it," Francis assured his questioner; "in fact, she invited me to meet her in the rose garden last night. When I arrived there, she was gone. I have heard nothing from her since."

"You spent the evening with her?"

"To my great content."

"What happened between you?"

"Nothing happened. I took the opportunity, however, of letting your daughter understand the nature of my feelings to her."

"Dear me! May I ask what they are?"

"I will translate them into words," Francis replied. "I wish your daughter to become my wife."

"You amaze me!" Sir Timothy exclaimed, with the old mocking smile at his lips. "How can you possibly contemplate association with the daughter of a man whom you suspect and distrust as you do me?"

"If I suspect and distrust you, it is your own fault," Francis reminded him. "You have declared yourself to be a criminal and a friend of criminals. I am inclined to believe that you have spoken the truth. I care for that fact just as little as I care for the fact that you are a millionaire, or that Margaret has been married to a murderer. I intend her to become my wife."

"Did you encourage her to leave me?"

"I did not. I had not the slightest idea that she had left the Sanctuary until Lady Cynthia told me, half-way to London this morning."

Sir Timothy was silent for several moments.

"Have you any idea in your own mind," he persisted, "as to where she has gone and for what purpose?"

"Not the slightest in the world," Francis declared. "I am just as anxious to hear from her, and to know where she is, as you seem to be."

Sir Timothy sighed.

"I am disappointed," he admitted. "I had hoped to obtain some information from you. I must try in another direction."

"Since you are here, Sir Timothy," Francis said, as his visitor prepared to depart, "may I ask whether you have any objection to my marrying your daughter?"

Sir Timothy frowned.

"The question places me in a somewhat difficult position," he replied coldly. "In a certain sense I have a liking for you. You are not quite the ingenuous nincompoop I took you for on the night of our first meeting. On the other hand, you have prejudices against me. My harmless confession of sympathy with criminals and their ways seems to have stirred up a cloud of suspicion in your mind. You even employ a detective to show the world what a fool he can look, sitting in a punt attempting to fish, with one eye on the supposed abode of crime."

"I have nothing whatever to do with the details of Shopland's investigations," Francis protested. "He is in search of Reggie Wilmore."

"Does he think I have secret dungeons in my new abode?" Sir Timothy demanded, "or oubliettes in which I keep and starve brainless youths for some nameless purpose? Be reasonable, Mr. Ledsam. What the devil benefit could accrue to me from abducting or imprisoning or in any way laying my criminal hand upon this young man?"

"None whatever that we have been able to discover as yet," Francis admitted.

"A leaning towards melodrama, admirable in its way, needs the leaven of well-balanced discretion and a sense of humor," Sir Timothy observed. "The latter quality is as a rule singularly absent among the mymidons of Scotland Yard. I do not think that Mr. Shopland will catch even fish in the neighborhood of the Walled House. As regards your matrimonial proposal, let us waive that until my daughter returns."

"As you will," Francis agreed. "I will be frank to this extent, at any rate. If I can persuade your daughter to marry me, your consent will not affect the matter."

"I can leave Margaret a matter of

"If I Can Persuade Your Daughter to Marry Me, Your Consent Will Not Affect the Matter."

two million pounds," Sir Timothy said, pensively.

"I have enough money to support my wife myself," Francis observed.

"Utopian but foolish," Sir Timothy declared. "All the same, Mr. Ledsam, let me tell you this. You have a curious attraction for me. When I was asked why I had invited you to the Sanctuary last night, I frankly could not answer the question. I didn't know. I don't know. Your dislike of me doesn't seem to affect the question. I was glad to have you there last night. It pleases me to hear you talk, to hear your views of things. I feel that I shall have to be very careful, Mr. Ledsam, or—"

"Or what?" Francis demanded.

"Or I shall even welcome the idea of having you for a son-in-law," Sir Timothy concluded reluctantly. "Make my excuses to Mr. Shopland. Au revoir!"

Shopland came in as the door closed behind the departing visitor. He listened to all that Francis had to say, without comment.

"If the Walled House," he said, at last, "is so carefully guarded that Sir Timothy has been informed of my watching the place and has been made aware of my mild questionings, it must be because there is something to conceal. I may or may not be on the track of Mr. Reginald Wilmore, but," the detective concluded, "of one thing I am becoming convinced—the Walled House will pay for watching."

* * * * * * *

It was a day when chance was kind to Francis. On his way towards the Sheridan, he came face to face with Margaret Hilditch, issuing from the doors of one of the great steamship companies.

She, too, came to a standstill at seeing him. Her first ejaculations betrayed a surprise which bordered on consternation. Then Francis, with a sudden inspiration, pointed to the long envelope which she was carrying in her hand.

"You have been to book a passage somewhere!" he exclaimed.

"Well?"

The monosyllable was in her usual level tone. Nevertheless, he could see that she was shaken.

"You were going away without seeing me again?" he asked reproachfully.

"Yes!" she admitted.

"Why?"

She looked up and down a little helplessly.

"I owe you no explanation for my conduct," she said. "Please let me pass."

"Could we talk for a few minutes, please?" he begged. "Tell me where you were going?"

"Oh, back to lunch, I suppose," she answered.

"Your father has been up, looking for you," he told her.

"I telephoned to the Sanctuary," she replied. "He had just left."

"I am very anxious," he continued, "not to distress you, but I cannot let you go away like this. Will you come to my rooms and let us talk for a little time?"

She made no answer. Somehow, he realized that speech just then was difficult. He called a taxi and handed her in. They drove to Clarges street in silence. He led the way up the stairs, gave some quick orders to his servant whom he met coming down, ushered her into his sitting room and saw her ensconced in an easy-chair.

"Please take off that terrible veil," he begged.

"It is pinned onto my hat," she told him.

"Then off with both," he insisted. "You can't eat luncheon like that. I'm not going to try and bully you. If you've booked your passage to Timbuctoo and you really want to go—why, you must. I only want the chance of letting you know that I am coming after you."

She took off her hat and veil and threw them onto the sofa, glancing sideways at a mirror let into the door of a cabinet.

"My hair is awful," she declared.

He laughed gayly, and turned around from the sideboard, where he was busy mixing cocktails.

"Thank heavens for that touch of humanity!" he exclaimed. "A woman who can bother about her hair when she takes her hat off, is never past praying for. Please drink this."

She obeyed. He took the empty glass away from her. Then he came over to the hearthrug by her side.

"Do you know that I kissed you last night?" he reminded her.

"I do," she answered. "That is why I have just paid eighty-four pounds for a passage to Buenos Aires."

"I should have enjoyed the trip," he said. "Still, I'm glad I haven't to go."

"Do you really mean that you would have come after me?" she asked curiously.

"Of course I should," he assured her. "Believe me, there isn't such an obstinate person in the world as the man of early middle-age who suddenly discovers the woman he means to marry."

"But you can't marry me," she protested.

"Why not?" he asked.

"Because I was Oliver Hilditch's wife, for one thing."

"Look here," he said, "if you had been Beelzebub's wife, it wouldn't make the least difference to me. You haven't given me much of a chance to tell you so yet, Margaret, but I love you."

She sat a little forward in her chair, her eyes were fixed upon his wonderingly.

"But how can you?" she exclaimed. "You know nothing of me except my associations, and they have been horrible. What is there to love in me? I am a frozen-up woman. Everything is dead here," she went on, clasping her hand to her heart. "I have no sentiment, no passion, nothing but an animal desire to live my life luxuriously and quickly."

He smiled confidently. Then, with very little warning, he sank on one knee, drew her face to his, kissed her lips and then her eyes.

"Are you so sure of all these things, Margaret?" he whispered. "Don't you think it is, perhaps, because there has been no one to care for you as I do—as I shall—to the end of my days? The lily you left on your chair last night was like you—fair and stately and beautiful, but a little bruised. You will come back to the world. My love will bring you. My care. Believe it, please!"

Then he saw the first signs of change in her face. There was the faintest shade of almost shell-like pink underneath the creamy-white of her cheeks. Her lips were trembling a little, her eyes were misty. With a sudden passionate impulse, her arms were around his neck, her lips sought his of their own accord.

"Let me forget," she sobbed. "Kiss me . . . let me forget!"

Francis' servant was both heavy-footed and discreet. When he entered the room with a tray, his master was standing at the sideboard.

"I've done the best I could, sir," he announced apologetically. "Shall I lay the cloth?"

"Leave everything on the tray, Brooks," Francis directed. "We will help ourselves. In an hour's time bring coffee."

The man glanced around the room.

"There are glasses on the sideboard, sir, and the corkscrew is here. I think you will have everything you want."

He departed, closing the door behind him. Francis held out his hands to Margaret. She rose slowly to her feet, looked in the glass helplessly and then back at him. She was very beautiful but a little dazed.

Red Crown

The High-Grade Gasoline

Gives Better Carburetion

Thirty-seven nationally known automobile factories buy Red Crown Gasoline in tank car lots for testing purposes.

These manufacturers use Red Crown because it has made good — because after comparison it has been found to deliver more mileage, more power, less carbon, easier starting, greater flexibility, quicker pick-up, and smoother acceleration.

It is practically certain that your car was tested and proved with Red Crown before it left the factory and that its entire carburetion system is adjusted to Red Crown Gasoline.

These are weighty arguments why you should use Red Crown, but there is a more forceful reason in the unqualified guarantee of uniformity which the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) gives you with every gallon of Red Crown you buy.

Fill up with Red Crown anywhere and everywhere and you will get more mileage, better mileage, and better carburetion.

Mrs. Jule Walters of Chicago came Friday evening to her summer home, Shore Acres, on South Arm Lake, bringing two men to work her farm. But when the fire had been built and things straightened around a bit, one of the men known as Cecil was nowhere to be found. After a search of the premises he not being found a call was made at the David Gaunt home at 11 o'clock in the evening thinking he might have wandered there, but he hadn't. Saturday morning Dep'y Sherrif Cook of East Jordan was called to look him up and it was reported he found him in the swamp near Three Bells school house but it was a mistake. He had wandered to the ferry four miles or more having stopped at different places. He crossed the ferry and acted so queer the ferryman called Sheriff Novack from Charlevoix who came and took him to Charlevoix and locked him up. His Chicago address was obtained from Mrs. Walters and a wire inquiry brought word he had been insane before. He is being taken care of until the proper ones can come for him.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"ENGINE"

READERS of Chaucer who are none too familiar with the medieval meaning of the word "engine" have naturally been puzzled over the statement by the English writer that "Man hath sapiences thre: memorie, engin and intellect."

But it should be remembered that this word, formed from the Greek gignere, "to beget," and the Latin ingenium, was understood as late as the Eighteenth century to mean talent or wit—practically a synohym for "ingenuity" which is derived from the same word-root. So, for example, in Puttenham, we come across the line "Such made most of their works by translation, few of their own engine," while the additional meaning of "temper" is apparent from the quotation from Fairfax's Tasso, "His fell ingine his grayer age did somewhat mitigate."

About the Sixteenth century the word began to take on the sense of the product of one's ingenuity, rather than the skill itself and was widely applied to any appliance or machine used in warfare, hunting, the commercial arts or torture. Thus a catapult, a cross-bow, a spinning wheel and a rack were all generically referred to as "engines" and it was not until the early part of the last century that the word was used in the currently accepted sense.

MISS SUSAN SHEDD

Miss Susan Shedd, niece of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, has been appointed director general of Near East Relief orphanages for the Persian area centering in Tabriz. Her appointment was made by the administrative committee of the relief organization in Persia in recognition of her recent achievement in moving 400 children from Hamadan, 400 miles overland, to Tabriz. She is a Vassar graduate.

"Now thet the rumor has spread thet many of the paintings in our big art galleries aren't the genuwine articles, we are for the fust time heving large crowds visiting 'em."

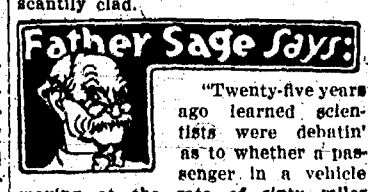

Grand Rapids—Joseph Burdulus, 45 years old, is back firing his steam boiler. He says he is glad that he failed in an attempt to end his life when he leaped from a bridge into the Grand River. The water was too cold and he ran home to get warm, he said.

Flint—Rev. Dr. Seth Reed, 100-year-old Flint Methodist Episcopal clergyman died from the effects of a fractured hip suffered when he fell out of bed at his home here. He had been in the ministry for 80 years, although retired since 1893.

Mt. Clemens—Five persons were injured when a southbound limited D U. R. car jumped the tracks at the Chesterfield Junction and crashed into a telephone pole. The accident is said to have been caused by a washout under several crossties.

Lansing — Pistol competitions at Grayling will open June 20, and the state national guard encampment, Aug. 7, if tentative dates set by Colonel John S. Bersey, adjutant general of the guard, are confirmed when the army appropriation bill is approved.

Saginaw—Mrs. Nicholas Alfano and her five children, the oldest nine years old, and the youngest four, escaped with difficulty when they awoke to find their house in flames. Neighbors aided Mrs. Alfano in getting the children out of the house, scantily clad.

"Twenty-five years ago learned scientists were debatin' as to whether a passenger in a vehicle moving at the rate of sixty miles an hour could maintain life. They are still arguin' the same question, except thet the speed has been changed to a thousand miles an hour."

A Picture That's Different
"Judgement of the Storm."

At last a picture that is absolutely different! Wonderful thrills! Tremendous drama! Beautiful romance! And a climax that will literally lift you out of your seat with excitment! It is more than a great picture—it is a slice of life, vibrant with realism, brought to the screen!

The Motion Picture News said:—"Judgment of the Storm" has every quality that goes into making a fine production—filled with dramatic T. N. T.—more entertainment than in pictures that cost a million—a punch in each reel big enough for the climax of several ordinary photoplays—scenes that will hold you in a vice-like grip—wonderful cast—an example of how good a picture can be.

This is one picture that you absolutely must see! At the Temple Sunday and Monday, April 27-28. See program.

COURAGE AND CONVICTION

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE was an unmistakable air of depression about Fred when he came home from high school one day during his sophomore year.

"Why this gloom?" I asked sympathetically.

"It's this way," he explained. "Edward and I are on the debate; the subject is woman's suffrage; we have the affirmative, and I'll lose, for Edward refuses to speak against his convictions."

It is a brave man who has the courage of his convictions, who knows where he stands, who has figured out his beliefs and does not hesitate to speak out. There are a good many human "woolen aprons" in the world who turn either side out as may seem most expedient or most profitable; not so Edward. He had his convictions and he was not afraid to set his foot down even in the face of a growing public sentiment. He was against the modern woman constantly demanding her right and he would not argue otherwise.

There are many who seem to be possessed of feebly struggling convictions, but they lack the courage of expression. If you give voice to a bold or unpopular idea, if you tackle an unpleasant or a difficult situation, they privately pat you on the back or whisper their approval secretly in your ear.

"I'm for you," they say. "I approve what you are saying and doing, but please don't mention my name in connection with the matter. It might prove embarrassing or get me into a nasty situation."

Such a man came to me not long ago. There were immoral and illegal conditions existing in the community, he said, that should be corrected. Certain officials should be exposed, certain property holders warned. It was an unpleasant job which someone ought to do.

"Why not you?" I asked him.

"Oh, it would be too public," he said, "too unpleasant; it would embarrass me. You are used to doing unpleasant things; you don't mind; you are not so sensitive as I am."

I wondered.

It is easy to throw the responsibility for expression or for action upon someone else—the mayor or the minister, the administration or the editor, your roommate, or your wife—and to stand quietly at a safe distance to avoid the bricks that are thrown, but it is not always indicative of courage. It is comparatively easy to rail against existing conditions when one has the crowd with him, when one's friends commend and approve, but it takes real courage to oppose a generally accepted theory, to stand firmly for a principle that our most intimate friends are against. All reformers have been men of strong convictions.

I have no doubt that as time goes on Edward may modify if not entirely change his convictions. He may even already have done so, but it strengthens one's faith in humanity to know that there are still boys who have beliefs and who will not be tricked into speaking against them, who have ideals and the courage to stand for them.

Composition of Kohl-rabi Very Much Like Mangels

Kohl-rabi is very much of the same composition as mangels, but the dry matter content is lower, and since the yield is generally less than that of mangels the cost of nutrients in kohl-rabi will be higher. The value of the dry matter will be almost equal to that of grain in the ration, pound for pound, but there is so much water that it is impossible to feed enough of kohl-rabi to replace grain. On the whole, kohl-rabi should occupy the same place in the ration that is occupied by mangels or other roots. Where there is a choice between growing kohl-rabi for stock or growing mangels, other things being equal, the mangels will make the most feed.

WE were in Houston, Nancy and I, when I saw a beautiful picture in a shop window. I wanted to go in and buy it at once—the price was cheap beyond belief, it seemed to me, but Nancy urged delay. I yielded as all well-trained husbands do, but though I have been to Houston several times since and have visited shops elsewhere and peered in eagerly at windows, I have never found a picture quite so much to my liking; I should have bought the one which first satisfied me.

An old neighbor of mine had long looked forward to a visit to California and the Northwest. He delayed going, not because he could not afford the trip, but simply because he hoped that next year conditions would be more favorable, or he could get away more easily, or he would enjoy the vacation more; but he never took the journey. He is hopelessly ill now, so that he will never have the pleasure which could easily have been his, and he is not now able to enjoy the retrospect of it.

We waste many precious hours in the contemplation of future recreations and enjoyments which may never come to us, when we might be getting happiness from the opportunities that are immediately around us. We delude ourselves with the hope that sometime in the future we shall have more time or be in better position for the enjoyment of life than today—when we are through college, when we have a good job, when the children are grown, when we have more money—forgetting that those people who have most money and most leisure are frequently the most discontented and unhappy.

We shall none of us be in a better position to enjoy ourselves than we are today; few of us, so long as we keep our strength and our facilities, at least, will ever have so much leisure for enjoyment or so great opportunity for happiness as right now.

I have always admired the courage of a dear friend of mine. She had for years wanted a handsome set of mahogany dining room furniture, but being in moderate circumstances did not feel that she could quite afford to throw away the substantial but ugly one she had. She was left a little legacy, and instead of putting it out at interest, as perhaps she should have done, she bought the beautiful mahogany which she had so desired. She died within a year, and I've always been glad that she had those months of happiness and satisfaction in her purchase.

It is the part of wisdom, of course, to look forward to the future and to prepare for it; most of us take too little thought for the morrow, but the flowers of happiness and enjoyment are about us every day; we do not need to wait for the distant future to pick them. If we refuse them today they may be like my picture—we may never have a chance at them again.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Kalamazoo—Gail Miller, papermill, worker, was seriously scolded when he fell into a vat of boiling water.

Cadillac—Another boulevard for tourists is contemplated here if the necessary right of way around Lake Mitchell can be obtained. This lake is about eight miles in diameter and the road would traverse some of the most densely wooded country in the Lower Peninsula.

Pontiac—As a result of opinions expressed at public meetings plans being formulated by Cassius J. Crawford, county drain commissioner, for a $5,000,000 sewage and sewage disposal system in Royal Oak township and portions of Troy, Southfield and Bloomfield townships.

Manistee—Approval by the board of education of the plan to re-establish the Manistee County Normal School assures that institution here again next fall. Lack of sufficient patronage caused its closing six months ago but the additional requirements of teachers have revived the need.

Detroit—Ten thousand dollars in war risk insurance and a Distinguished Service Cross await the heirs of Edward G. Mason, born in Detroit Dec. 16, 1899, and killed in action in France, Nov. 10, 1918, according to word received by Theodore W. Kolbe, department adjutant of the American Legion. Mason's heirs have been sought by the United States Veteran's Bureau and the adjutant-general's office for five years without success.

Lansing—Eight bus lines, operating out of Detroit, are cited before the public utilities commission in orders issued to show cause why they should not be forced to quit operations. They will have to answer charges of excessive bus speed. The commission recently checked up on the lines. In some cases it was reported the buses traveled 45 miles an hour. Thirty miles is the limit placed on buses by the commission. Also it was found some drivers have driven 16 hours a day. The commission's rule is 10 hours as the maximum.

You love to give advice?

Advice, unless it's carelessly given, never really hurts. It does you good, because it makes you think of others. Thinking of others always helps the country! There is too little of it. If folks take your advice and it goes wrong it's only you who suffer—and they have you to blame it on! If the advice turns out well—you will probably never hear of it again! You should fret! Let them laugh, if you advise, do your best.

The Cottage Gardener

When the Cottage Garden Is Large, or Where an Extra Lot or Two Have Been Taken Over by an Enthusiastic Tiller of the Soil, the Entire Family Can Be of Much Help.

Have Raspberries Summer and Fall

Delicious Red Fruit Is Now Very Successful Two-Crop Producer.

Two crops of delicious red raspberries where but one grew before is an achievement of recent years, and we now have varieties which will not only produce a heavy crop in the early summer, but a splendid crop during the late fall. Red raspberries have for many years been one of the most desirable crops for the garden in sections of the country to which they are adapted, points out the United States Department of Agriculture. The development of the fall-bearing varieties,

Raspberries Good Bearers.

however, has greatly increased their value.

Two-crop raspberry plants must be handled just right in order to get two crops a year from them. About the time the first crop is ripening the new shoots are as tall as the old plants and grow much taller. There is always a temptation to clip off the tip of a tall-growing red raspberry shoot, but if this is done with this type of raspberry, the fall crop is destroyed. The new shoots must not be pruned at all during the growing season, because blossoms will begin forming on the tips in August or September and a good crop of raspberries is the result. Even if these canes should grow seven or eight feet long, they should not be cut back in the summer time. The fall crop of raspberries usually lasts until freezing weather comes.

The fall crop of raspberries is of even better quality than the spring crop, and when offered for sale usually brings a very high price. It is just a little out of the ordinary to have red raspberries in the fall.

The plants of two-crop raspberries should be set in the spring. If they make a fairly good growth there will be a crop of berries the following fall. There will then be two crops a year as long as the plants are in good condition. They should be well cultivated and fertilized so that good crops of fruit and good growth of canes may be made.

During the summer the canes which lived over the previous winter will produce the early crop fruit. Just as soon as this crop is picked the old canes should be cut out and burned.

It is so easy to grow and take care of double-crop raspberries that anyone who has a little land which may be devoted to berries will be well repaid by setting a few plants of the double-crop kind.

In the very cold sections of the country, where the thermometer goes more than 20 below zero, this double-crop type of raspberries would not prove hardy, unless the canes are laid down and covered with some kind of winter protection such as straw, coarse manure or earth. The variety known as Ranere or St. Regis is considered one of the best double-crop sorts.

Sweet Potatoes in Thirty-Six States

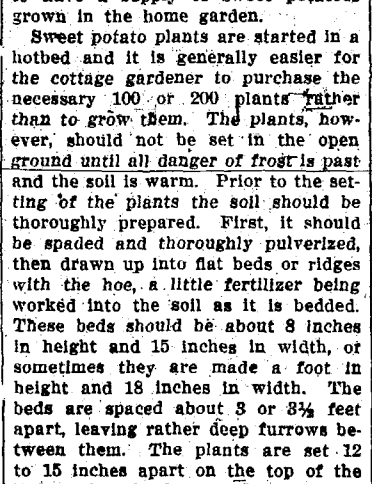

Popular Tuber Should Have Sandy Soil, Sunshine, Plenty of Heat.

Sweet potatoes can be grown in at least 36 states, according to the records of the United States Department of Agriculture, and there is every reason why a small planting of sweet potatoes should be made in every cottage garden within those states, especially where the soil is of a sandy nature. While it is true that the sweet potato crop is more or less uncertain in the far North, yet if the season is reasonably dry and warm and the plants given a good start, they will produce a fair crop. It is a great satisfaction to have a supply of sweet potatoes grown in the home garden.

Sweet potato plants are started in a hotbed and it is generally easier for the cottage gardener to purchase the necessary 100 or 200 plants rather than to grow them. The plants, however, should not be set in the open ground until all danger of frost is past and the soil is warm. Prior to the setting of the plants the soil should be thoroughly prepared. First, it should be spaded and thoroughly pulverized, then drawn up into flat beds or ridges with the hoe, a little fertilizer being worked into the soil as it is bedded. These beds should be about 8 inches in height and 15 inches in width, or sometimes they are made a foot in height and 18 inches in width. The beds are spaced about 3 or 3½ feet apart, leaving rather deep furrows between them. The plants are set 12 to 15 inches apart on the top of the beds and each plant is given about a quart of water around its roots as it is set. The soil is then well drawn about the plants.

Sweet potatoes want plenty of sunshine and an abundance of heat, but not too much moisture. The surface of the soil should be kept loosened and all weeds pulled out, but aside from this, sweet potatoes require very little attention.

The crop should be dug just as soon as the vines are killed by frost; in fact, the potatoes should be dug before the vines are badly frozen. If the vines become frozen it is necessary to cut them off just above the ground before the frozen sap has a chance to go down into the potatoes. Sweet potatoes should be dug on a bright day, allowed to dry an hour or so in the sunshine and then placed in baskets and stored where the temperature will at first be about 80 degrees and later around 60 degrees. One very successful grower follows the practice of hanging the baskets of sweet potatoes to the ceiling of his cellar near the hot-air furnace. By placing the potatoes near the ceiling, where they are warm and dry, they will usually keep throughout the winter.

Sweet Potatoes in Home Garden.

One hundred sweet potato plants will set a row 125 feet in length and should yield from two to five bushels of excellent potatoes for the table.

Your Next Car

Will be this Light-Six, if you learn the truth

WHEN you buy a car in the "thousand-dollar" class, here are some things you should know.

We made a canvass of men who bought rival cars in this class. And we found that 96 in each 100 bought without knowing these facts.

So, for your sake and our sake, we want to present them to you.

Save $200 to $400

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. It builds in model factories, modernly equipped. It has spent $38,000,000 in the past five years on new-day plants and equipment.

By quantity and up-to-dateness it saves large sums per car. A car like this Light-Six, built under ordinary conditions, would cost $200 to $400 more.

11.4% less to run

This supreme quality means lower operating cost. Owners of fleets of cars in this class made audited records to prove this.

They compared 329 cars, running up to 25,000 miles each. And they found that the Studebaker Light-Six cost 11.4% less to operate than the average of its rivals. This includes depreciation. The saving was nearly one cent per mile.

The reasons are these

The Studebaker Light-Six, in its chassis, represents the best we know. In steel and in workmanship it is identical with the costliest cars we build.

It is designed and superintended by an engineering department which costs us $500,000 yearly.

Each steel formula has been proved the best for its purpose by years of tests. On some we pay 15% premium to makers to get them exactly right.

Each car in the building gets 32,000 tests and inspections.

The crankshafts are machined on all surfaces, as was done in the Liberty Airplane Motors. This extra care costs us $600,000 yearly, but it means perfect balance in the motor.

More Timken bearings are used in this car than in any competitive car within $1,500 of its price.

There are 517 operations in making this car exact to 1/1000th of an inch. And 122 are exact to one-half that.

Genuine leather cushions, ten inches deep. Unusual equipment. Scores of extra values.

Made by the leaders

This is one of the cars which has made Studebaker the leader in quality cars. Our sales have almost trebled in three years. The trend toward Studebakers has become a sensation.

Last year 145,167 people paid $201,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

Back of this car is an honored name, which for 72 years has stood for high ideals.

Behind it are $90,000,000 of assets, staked on pleasing you better than others.

Ah! Backache Gone Rub Lumbago Away

Rub Pain from back with small trial bottle of old "St. Jacobs Oil."

Ah! Pain is gone!

Quickly?—Yes. Almost instant relief from soreness, stiffness, lameness and pain follows a gentle rubbing with "St. Jacobs Oil."

Rub this soothing, penetrating oil right on your painful back, and like magic, relief comes. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless backache, lumbago and sciatica remedy which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin.

Straighten up! Quit complaining! Stop those torturous "stitches." In a moment you will forget that you ever had a weak back, because it won't hurt or be stiff or lame. Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from your druggist now and get this lasting relief.

ITCHING ECZEMA DRIED RIGHT UP BY THIS SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

PLANTING PEPPERS

OLD-FASHIONED farmers in some sections of the country will assure you that if you want to have your pepper plants do well you should have them set out by a red-headed person. Same thing if you grow the plants from the seed—get a red-haired person to sow the seed. Some say a quick-tempered, irritable person, even if he is not red headed, will do as well. This is a clear case of sympathetic magic applied to agriculture and the application of sympathetic magic to agriculture is not only one of the oldest, if not the very oldest, phases of the mental development of primitive man, but is one which exists in the form of various superstitions all over the world today.

In some parts of Europe the peasants at planting time leap high in the air in the sown fields in order that the crops may grow high; in another a sower of wheat wears a golden ring in order that the grain may have a rich, golden color and a stone, wrapped in a white rag, is placed among the cabbages in order that they may "head up" white and hard; while in Sumatra the rice is sown by women with their hair hanging loose in order that the cereal may grow luxuriantly and have long stalks.

Instances of similar practices might be multiplied almost indefinitely. All are inheritances from the primitive; the persistance of primitive magic into the Twentieth century, subsisting side by side with colleges of agriculture.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, can not injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.

A GOOD FRONT PAGE

By THOMAS A. CLARK

Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE theory of the newspaper man that it is the front page that sells the paper is something more than theory, and it applies to many things besides newspapers.

I heard a distinguished engineer say once that a badly fitting suit of clothes had ruined the prospects of many an otherwise excellent engineer. Of course it is unwise for any tradesman to exhibit too large a percentage of his wares in the show window, but a good appearance makes an effective first impression, and a good first impression, when backed up by something substantial, goes a long way toward success.

If I were in business, I'd see that the walk or the stairway leading to my office were swept clean every day if I had to do the work myself, for I know that it is the first impression that often gets the trade.

I dropped into a business office last week to have an interview and perhaps to do business with a man who is really a genius in his way. The waiting room was a grimy, disheveled place that gave one a repugnant feeling as he entered. The table in the center of the room was frowsy with debris and thick with the dust of weeks. Cobwebs festooned the ceiling, and the floor was littered with toothpicks and cigarette stubs and long, thin rolls of "pussy willows"; yet well-dressed women as well as men came there to wait for the services of a man who was one of the best of his profession in the state. It was hard for me to believe that the work which he would turn out would receive more careful attention than did his office.

An undergraduate handed me a paper one day this week to look over and to pass upon. It was rather thoughtfully done, I found when I got into it, but I had been prejudiced against it at the outset. It was carelessly arranged and badly written and wrongly indorsed, and sloppy and untidy in its general appearance. He had given little attention to the make-up of his front page.

The principle may be applied to taste—to the rouge put on too thick or the shoe polish too thin; to slangy speech and careless manners or to the delayed dinner call; to soiled collars and finger nails in mourning or to carelessly written lecture notes and halting recitations—like the combination tool, it works equally well under all conditions. It is true, no doubt, that the clothes do not make the man, but they give one a very definite impression of him; the front page is, of course, not all the paper, but it is an excellent index of what one may expect as he reads farther on.

THE ONE WHO WON

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

TWO there were upon a quest:
One went east, and one went west;
One was rich, and one was poor,
One the highroad, one the moor.

One of them (no matter which,
Maybe poor, or maybe rich;
One with wealth, or one with not,
Road or moor, no matter what).

One of them, who trudged along,
As he traveled, sang a song,
Smiled to see the sun again,
Played with snow, and laughed at rain.

One of them found many things
All along to give him wings,
Morning-glory, whippoorwill,
Often helped him up the hill.

One of them, I'm sad to say,
Traveled quite another way,
Cursed the rocks, and cursed the road,
Ev'ry labor, ev'ry load.

One of them, (no matter whom,
Man of gladness, man of gloom,
Man of wealth, or man of naught),
Found at last the thing he sought.

One of them (no matter which,
On the highroad, in the ditch)
Found the thing he sought, although
Which it was I do not know.

One of them, I know at least,
Found work fun, and life a feast,
If he won, or if he lost,
Found the journey worth the cost.

Two there were. Whichever came,
Wealth or want, or failure, fame,
Good or bad, or right or wrong,
One at least had had the song.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

THERE are all sorts of bread puddings and when well prepared are delicious. Here is:

Another Bread Pudding.

Take two cupfuls of bread crumbs, a cupful of sugar, a cupful of molasses, a half cupful of raisins, a dash of cinnamon and two cupfuls of sweet milk. Bake half an hour, stirring often, then add four cupfuls of milk and bake two hours longer. Serve hot.

Pineapple Salad.

Mix diced pineapple with equal parts of diced celery and half the quantity of shredded almonds. Serve in nests of head lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Ginger Bread.

Take one cupful of sugar, one cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of melted lard, one teaspoonful of soda in one cupful of boiling water, one egg, three cupfuls of flour. Beat the egg, add the sugar, lard and molasses with a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of ginger, then add the three cupfuls of flour and when well-mixed add the boiling water and soda. Stir well and pour into a large dripping pan. Bake forty minutes.

Spinach With Cream.

Wash three pounds of spinach and put to cook in a large saucepan; cook, stirring occasionally, twelve minutes; then put through a fine sieve, saving all the liquor; add four tablespoonfuls of butter and pepper and salt to taste, cook for fifteen minutes, then add three tablespoonfuls of cream; mix well and pile in the center of a dish with croutons surrounding the spinach.

Hats and Scarfs Go Hand in Hand

Coats, frocks, suits—all have their scarfs this season, sometimes attached, but more often separate and made of sheer materials and contrasting colors. But hats go farther than any of them and not only have scarfs, but scarfs to match them. Plain and printed silks and crepes are used for these scarfs and for trimming the hats that bear them company.

Unique Slogan of Bank of Petersburg, N. Dak.

"We bank on the cow, the sow, the ewe, and the hen."

The First National Bank of Petersburg, N. Dak., has this slogan on its unique bank statement recently issued.

Pictures of cows, sheep, and swine rather than moneybags are the decorations used. On the same page with a statement of the bank's financial condition is one of the agricultural status of the community.

The report points with pride to the improved live stock and diversified nature of the farming in the district: The 6,000 breeding ewes with pure bred rams at the head of every flock, the 60 pure bred bulls, the 100 or more registered cows besides a great number of high-grade females, the large acreage of Grimm alfalfa, the $51,000 worth of produce shipped out during the past year, and the activities of the Petersburg Live Stock Shipping association, which handled 30 cars of live stock last year.

The officials of the bank have been active in co-operating with the United States Department of Agriculture in encouraging the use of pure bred sires and in general live stock improvement.

Growers Like Oiled Wrapper for Apples

Use Is Suggested as Result of Thorough Trials.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The use of oiled-paper wrappers for preventing apple scald is finding increased favor among growers, particularly in the Northwest, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Approximately 15,000,000 boxes of apples were wrapped for storage last fall, whereas in 1922 there were about 600,000 boxes so treated. The practice of using oiled paper for wrappers is suggested by the department as a result of a number of years of trials with various methods for preventing the appearance of the disease in storage apples and apples in transit, which annually causes great loss to dealers, buyers and shippers, and ultimate disappointment to consumers.

Where in the past it has been customary to wrap the apples in ordinary paper, as is done with the western crop, the use of oiled paper does not entail any additional effort or trouble and adds but two cents to the cost of each box. Apples wrapped in oiled paper of the proper kind come through the winter in excellent condition and have been received with special favor on the market, especially during the latter part of the season. In May, 1923, oiled wrapper apples were selling on the New York auction for $1 more per box than similar apples in unoiled wrappers. Eastern producers who barrel their apples have not made any great use of the new practice because of the impracticability of wrapping apples for barrelling. This discovery and practice make it possible to ship apples long distances after storage as well as before storage with little or no loss from scald, and enables growers and dealers to obtain a wider distribution of their product and to safely withhold part of it from the market till the peak of the apple season is past. It reduces the perishability of the crop and makes for a more orderly distribution of the supply and a better market.

Another Boost For Chiropractic

East Jordan, Michigan, April 16th, 1924

"A rooster crows in the morning to let the world know his hen is going to lay an egg so that the hungry world may be benefited by it. I am crowing about what Chiropractic has done for my baby so that the sick world may know and be benefited.

"At birth my baby Ellis weighed ten pounds, he did not seem to gain and was sick continuously. We tried everything that the Medical Profession had to offer but he grew worse until at the age of seven months we gave up all hopes of ever saving him, he was as poor and thin as he could be and he only weighed ten pounds—the same as at birth. We were advised by a friend to try Chiropractic, so on Feb'y 26th we called J. W. Ellison our local Chiropractor. He at once started giving Spinal Adjustments and we could notice that little Ellis began to gain at once and now after seven weeks he weighs fifteen and one-half pounds—a gain of five and one-half pounds. Words fail me in expressing my thanks and appreciation to the wonderful Science of Chiropractic as I know our little darling would have been dead now if Chiropractic had not lifted him out of the grave. —I pray and hope that other Mothers whose little loved ones are suffering, can read this message and wake up to the fact that through Chiropractic there is ray of hope even after all other methods have been found worthless.

"I am giving this message to the world on my own free will. I feel it my duty to all suffering Humanity, as an appreciation to the wonderful Science of Chiropractic.

"I feel that my prayer to our Father in Heaven that he would send someone who could save my precious baby, was answered through Chiropractic. I now pray for God's blessings to guide and protect all Chiropractors, that this wonderful and noble work can carry on and on.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.
